

Genesis, Covenant, Jubilee, Shmitah and the Land Ethic

neohasid.org ©2010

The Genesis texts in this study trace the devolution of humanity's two most important relationships, the relationship with the land and the relationship with God. Specifically, whenever one relationship degenerates so does the other one. Alongside these two relationships, one also sees the human relationship with the animals changing, from one of intimacy to one of 'terror' on the part of the animals as humans become predators.

The Exodus and Leviticus texts on the Shmitah (Sabbatical) year emphasize ideas and give textual clues that show that Shmitah is a response to and a solution or tikun for the tragedy of Genesis. Here, as the right relationship with the land is restored, so too is the people's relationship with God ('I will become Elohim for you and you will become my people'). The relationship with the animals also transforms into a more Edenic one of sharing and convivence.

The fundamental understanding that these texts drive at is that the goal and purpose of the Torah covenant, on a grand scale, is that the Israelites observe the Shmitah year, and that in doing so, they will repair the relationship with the Earth that was destroyed in the generations leading up to the flood. Essentially, the covenant with Abraham is meant to take one people and one land, and put them in a right relationship with each other, so as to be a model for how humanity should live. That model is created by the observance of Shmitah.

The importance of Shmitah is emphasized by the fact that according to Leviticus, if God has to choose between taking care of the people and taking care of the land, God will choose the land over the people. The land is not 'promised' to the Israelites except conditionally, based on whether they respect the land's rights and do justice with her and through her. This is why, according to the rabbis as well as the author of Chronicles, neglect of the Shmitah year leads to exile.

Every human right, as the Torah understands it—the right to be fed, the right to feed oneself and one's family, the right to have equal access to resources, the right to be freed from debt and from slavery—are all tied to the observance of Shmitah and the cycle of seven years. The model of justice between human beings is fundamentally grounded in the idea of justice for the land, and for the Earth.

P.S. I have been teaching these texts on Genesis and Shmitah since 1993, when I first prepared them for a tikun leil Shavuot. Since then I have taught them many times at synagogues, at Teva Center and Kayam seminars, the Green Zionist Alliance, CAJE, Rabbis for Human Rights and other conferences, to educators, rabbis and lay people. Every time I teach them I learn new things. This is the first time I have created study sheets for these texts meant to be used independently by students and by other teachers. I hope the experience you have with these texts will also be rich. Please send me your insights and your feedback!

Introduction for teachers

How to use these texts:

In order to emphasize the connections between the texts, the translation method used is 'concordant', that is, similar words in Hebrew are translated as much as possible by similar words in English. Strange phrases in Hebrew are also translated so as to sound strange in English. The goal is not just to trace the evolution of ideas about our relationship with the Earth, but also to provide a text that can be used for understanding and creating midrashic interpretation, which often depends on specific phrasing and repeated words. For some phrases more than one translation is offered. (Note that God names are transliterated rather than translated. Note also that British conventions for quotes are followed.)

The texts themselves highlight which phrases and passages deal with our relationship to the land, and which deal with our relationship to the animals and to eating. (See the key at the bottom of any page.) The commentary includes interpretations that relate to questions of ecology and our relationship with the Earth or land, as well as interpretations that are simply elucidating or interesting (and, I hope, fascinating). It also includes occasional discussion questions. Those comments that are most important for studying our ecological relationships are starred (*). Though there is a particular picture that I hope readers will arrive at, the commentaries include not only interpretations that support that goal, but also some interpretations that contradict it.

Students should come away both with a sense of how the Torah covenant can be interpreted ecologically, as well as a sense of other possible interpretations. My intention is that there be enough material here for students to arrive at their own conclusions, independent of the author or the teacher.

A second, abridged version of these texts (one sheet long) is also available, which focuses on the recurring trope of the wild animal or chayah. It is both shorter and less dense, divided into many more sections by themes. What can be seen most clearly there is that our relationship with the animals is a prism which reflects our relationship with the land and with God. In fact, the most explicit link between Eden and Shmitah is that we share the same food as the wild animals in both contexts. The abridged version does not have commentary and should be studied in conjunction with this longer version.

Any portion of this text study can be done in chevruta or paired study, where each partner takes turns reading the text out loud and explaining it. It is recommended that someone teaching these texts first study them thoroughly for themselves in chevruta or in a group setting.

a. Elohim (God) said: Let us make a human adam in our figure like our image, and they will dominate/prevail vayirdu over the fish of the sea and over the bird of the skies and over the beast b'heimah and over all the land and over every crawler crawling on the land. And Elohim created the adam in god's image, in Elohim's image god created him, male and female god created them. And Elohim blessed them and Elohim said to them: Bear fruit and increase and fill the land and occupy her umil'u et ha'aretz v'kivshuba and prevail ur'du over the fish of the sea and over the bird of the skies and over every animal crawling on the land kol bachayah haromeset 'al ha'aretz. And Elohim said: Here, I have given to you-all every plant/grass 'esev seeding seed which is on the face of all the land and every tree which has in it tree-fruit seeding seed, for you it will be for eating, and for every animal of the land chayat ha'aretz and for every bird of the skies and for every crawler on the land in which there is a living soul nefesh chayah, every green plant yerek 'esev for eating. And it was so. Gen 1:26-30

b. And Elohim saw all that god made, and here: very good v'hineh tov m'od. And the skies and the land were completed and all their hosts, and Elohim completed in the seventh day god's work which god made. And in the seventh day Elohim stopped/rested vayishbot from all god's work which god made. And Elohim blessed the seventh day and made him holy, for in him god stopped from all god's work which god created to do. Gen 1:31-2:3

c. Every growth of the field would yet be in the land and every plant of the field would yet grow, for YHVH (Adonai, Hashem, Lord) Elohim had not caused rain on the land, and an adam to serve the land was not...YHVH Elohim formed vayitzeir the human ha'adam, dirt from the ground/earth 'afar min ha'adamah and blew in his nostrils a living breath nishmat chayyim, and the adam became a living soul nefesh chayah. YHVH Elohim planted a garden gan in Eden eastward and put there the adam which god formed, and caused to grow from the land every tree pleasurable nechmad for seeing and good for eating, and the life-tree in the middle of the gan and the tree of knowing good and bad/evil...YHVH Elohim took the adam and placed/rested him in gan Eden to work her/to serve her and to watch over her L'avdah ul'shomrah. And YHVH Elohim commanded over the adam, saying: From every tree in the garden eating you will eat; and from the tree of knowing good and bad, you will not eat from him, for in the day of your eating from him dying you will die. Gen 2:5-17

d. YHVH Elohim said: No good is the adam being by himself – I will make for him a help opposite him. And YHVH Elohim formed every animal of the field chayat basadeh and every bird of the skies and brought unto the adam to see what he would call to him...and the adam called names to every beast b'heimah and every bird of the skies and every animal of the field kol chayot basadeh, and for Adam no help opposite/corresponding to him was found...And YHVH Elohim built the side tzeila which god took from the adam into a woman and brought her unto the adam. Gen 2:18-22

The Kabbalah teaches that the sin was not eating the fruit but separating the fruit from the tree. Once the fruit was ripe, they would have been invited to eat it.

e. The two of them were naked 'arumim, the adam and his woman, and they were not embarrassed. And the snake was clever 'arum beyond any chayat basadeh...and he said to the woman: Did Elohim even say, you-all will not eat from any tree of the gan?...And the woman said: Elohim said...from the tree in the middle of the gan you-all will not eat and will not touch...And the woman saw, that the tree was good to eat and he was desire for the eyes, and the tree was pleasurable for enlightening nechmad l'haskeil, and she took from his fruit and ate and gave to her man with her, and he ate. Gen 2:25-3:6

* Prevail over. Dominion over other animals does not include permission to eat them. If so, how did the first humans exercise dominion? Traditional answers include: They could use the animals for work (b.Sanbedrin). They gave names to the animals; when the animals were called, they would come (Rashi). For Maimonides, this is merely a description of human nature, not a mitzvah.

In god's image. Lit. 'his image'. Acc. to some this first phrase refers to Adam's image rather than God's. The end of the verse emphasizes that God's image is both male and female. Note that pronouns referring to God (he, him, his) are replaced by 'god' or 'god's' throughout.

* Occupy her. Usu. translated 'conquer'. The humans were told to fill and occupy the land, i.e. the Earth—this would imply that they were destined to leave Eden.

* I have given to you-all. The humans and the other animals all ate together from the same food supply, acc. to Rashi. Ramban disagrees, saying that the humans were to eat tree fruit and plant seeds (e.g. grain, beans), but not the plants themselves, which were for the animals. For Rashi yerek 'esev means all the plants, grass trees, fruit etc. that could be eaten. For Ramban yerek 'esev means what was specifically given to the other animals.

Very good. What makes the whole 'very good', more so than any of the parts? A midrashic answer: 'Very' means 'death'. Another answer: 'Very' means 'Adam' (Bereishit Rabbah). Maimonides says the phrase indicates that human beings and all other species are 'of no value at all in comparison with the whole that exists and endures'.

* The seventh day. Though the first story of Creation seems to prescribe hierarchy, it also includes the unity and peace of Shabbat.

Seventh. The paradigm of the seventh embedded in creation becomes the basis for Shabbat, Shmitah (the sabbatical year) and Yovel (the Jubilee). Some say 7 is unrelated to nature, but there are (conventionally) seven planets, colors, seas, continents, and musical notes.

Rain. A mist, eid, comes up from the ground to moisten the soil so it can be formed into the human. Adam can be read as eid plus dam, blood.

* From the ground. Min ha'adamah. The second story explains adam to be derived from adamah.

Living soul. In section a the other animals are called nefesh chayah, while in c the human becomes a nefesh chayah. Many translations obscure this equality. Chayah can mean 'animal', but here it means 'living' and modifies nefesh, meaning 'soul', 'breath' or 'being'.

* To serve. L'avdah ul'shomrah, often translated 'to till and to tend' or 'to work her and guard her'. L'avdah means la'avod otah. Just as L'avdo in the second paragraph of the Shema means la'avod oto, 'to serve' or 'to worship' God—not 'to work God'—this can have a similar meaning.

Animal of the field. Chayat basadeh means wild animal.

No help corresponding to him. Ramban explains that the adam named the other animals, but could find no one to give him a name.

Built the side. Acc. to midrash and Kabbalah, the woman is made from one half of the adam, not just a rib.

Will not touch. Acc. to midrash, Adam expanded the prohibition to include touching when he told Eve.

As a consequence of the fall, three relationships deteriorate: that between God and humans, that between woman and man, and that between humans and the land. Genesis until Abraham is essentially the history of the continued degeneration of these relationships.

f. And the eyes of them both were opened and they knew, that they were naked `eirumim ... They heard the voice of YHVH Elohim walking in the gan and they hid, the adam and his woman, from the face of YHVH Elohim... YHVH Elohim called unto the adam and said to him: Where are you? Ayekah!... and god said: Who told you that you are naked? From the tree which I commanded you against eating did you eat?... Unto the woman god said: Increasing I will increase your pain `itzyonekh and your pregnancy, in pain you will birth children, and toward your man your desire t'sbukatekh and he will rule over/within you bakb. And to Adam god said: Because you listened to your woman's voice and ate from the tree which I commanded you saying you will not eat from him, cursed is the ground/soil for your sake arurah ba'adamah ba'avurkha, in pain b'itzavon you will eat all the days of your life; and thorn and thistle will grow for you and you will eat the grass `esev of the field. By the sweat of your nostrils / your anger you will eat bread, until you return to the ground, because from her were you taken, for you are dirt and will turn back to dirt... YHVH Elohim said: Here the human has become like one from us to know good and bad. And now, lest he send out his hand and take also from the life-tree and eat and live for all-time—YHVH Elohim sent him / threw him out of gan Eden to work / to serve la'avod the ground from where he had been taken ba'adamah asher lukach misham. And god drove out vayigaresh the adam and made the k'ruvim dwell from the east of gan Eden and the glowing-hot sword turning itself, to watch over the life-tree's path. Gen 3:7-24

g. Kayin said to Hevel his brother: it was while they were in the field, and Kayin rose up to Hevel his brother and killed him... And YHVH said unto Kayin: Where is Hevel your brother? And he said: I didn't know! Am I the one watching over my brother? And god said: What did you do? The voice of your brother's bloods, they scream unto me from the ground. Now you are cursed from the ground arur atab min ba'adamah which split open her mouth to take your brother's bloods from your hand. Because you will work / will serve ta'avod the ground, she will not add giving her strength. Shaken off and thrust out na`v'nad you will be in the land. And Kayin said to YHVH: Great is my sin, beyond carrying. Here you have driven me ben geirashta oti today away from the face of the ground mip'nei ba'adamah and from your face I will be hid, and I will be na`v'nad in the land, and it will be whoever finds me will kill me. Gen 4:8-14

h. YHVH said: My spirit will not strain in humanity ba'adam for all-time by reason that he is flesh... YHVH saw, that the human's evil ra`at ba'adam in the land was tremendous, and every leaning of his heart's thought was only evil/bad all day. And YHVH drew-in vayinachem, for god made the adam within the land, and god was pained unto god's heart. And YHVH said: I will blot out the human adam I created from off the face of the land, from human to beast to crawler to bird of the skies, for I am withdrawn-against nichamti my making them... And the land was ruined before the Elohim and the land was filled up with violence. And Elohim saw the land and here, her ruin, for all flesh ruined his way on the land. And Elohim said to Noach: The end of all flesh comes before me, for the land is filled with violence from before them. Here am I going to ruin them with the land. Gen 6:3-13

* Cursed is the ground for your sake. This can mean 'for your benefit'. Usu. translated 'cursed...because of you'. The connection between adam and adamah remains strong as both are cursed together. Could cursing the ground with the humans help them to do t'shuvah, to return to God?

Eat the grass of the field. This could mean cultivated plants or specifically grains (which are grasses). Many see this story as a parable about hunter-gatherers being supplanted by agriculture. Ramban, uniquely, thinks the humans ate grain (i.e. grass seeds) before, but now ate the grass itself. (See above in a, on 'I have given to you-all'.)

Like one from us. A midrash interprets this to mean 'like one separated away from us'. The humans are separate from God, some say, because after eating from the tree of knowing (tree of knowledge), their knowledge of good and bad becomes mixed up, that is, they experience good and bad in the same things at the same times.

Lest he send out his hand. The human was supposed to first eat from the life-tree (tree of life). How might gaining awareness of good and bad make it impossible to eat from the tree of life?

To serve the ground from where he had been taken. The place where the human being was first created. The humans are not simply thrown out of Eden but are brought somewhere where they have a special connection to the ground: their birthplace.

Drove out. Vayigaresh. The human is exiled from the garden, but not from the ground. The root grsh also means 'to divorce'.

Scream from the ground. The second sin is against the ground as well as against Hevel. 'Hevel' can also mean empty breath, as in the book of Eccl.

* Cursed from the ground. This can mean, 'cursed away from the ground' or 'cursed by the ground'. The language indicates something radically different from what happened before, when the ground was 'cursed for the sake of' the humans.

Shaken off and thrust out. Kayin's punishment is to be completely disconnected from the land.

You have driven me away from the face of the ground. Kayin faces a double exile, from the ground and from God—this is what makes the punishment too great, 'beyond carrying'. Kayin is exiled specifically from 'the face' of each one. What does this mean about being in relationship to the Earth?

* The human's evil in the land... blot out the human from off the face of the land...the land was ruined. The sin is against the land; God's response is to cleanse the land. There is no ambiguity about this aspect of the flood.

And Elohim saw. Like Sodom (Sodom), and like in Egypt, when God saw the Israelites' enslavement, 'seeing' means understanding with empathy and compassion.

Noach. When Noach is named, his father says: 'This one will comfort us yinachameinu from the works and the pain of our hands from the ground which YHVH cursed.' Instead, YHVH is the one who is 'vayinachem'.

The relationship between humanity and the land is replaced by a covenant. A covenant is a contract which is binding on those who are not present, i.e., future generations, and is for the sake of a greater whole, i.e., the land and all the animals. The animals are equal partners alongside the humans in this covenant.

i. Elohim remembered Noah and all the animals kol bachayah and beasts which were with him in the ark...And Elohim spoke to Noah saying: Go out from the ark, you and your woman and your sons and your sons' women with you; every animal chayah which is with you, from all flesh of bird and beast and every crawler crawling on the land which is with you, going out with you, and they will swarm in the land and bear fruit and increase in the land...And Noah built an altar for YHVH and took from every cult-pure beast and from every cult-pure bird and sent up burnt-up-offerings with the altar. YHVH smelled the sweet smell and YHVH said unto god's heart: I will not add to cursing anymore the ground for the sake of humanity ba'avur ha'adam - for the human heart's leaning is evil/bad from his youth, and I will not add anymore to striking down all life as I did. Throughout all the land's days, sowing and reaping and cold and hot and summer and winter and day and night will not stop/rest lo yishbotu. Elohim blessed Noah and his sons and said to them: Bear fruit and increase and fill the land. And a fearing of you and terror of you will be over every animal of the land chayat ha'aretz and every bird of the skies, everything which crawls the ground and all the fish of the sea, into your hands they are given. All that crawls which lives, for you it will be for eating, like green plants I have given to you-all. But just the flesh with his soul nafsho, his blood, you will not eat. And just your blood for your souls will I require, by the hand of every animal chayah and by the hand of every human...for in the image of Elohim god made the human. And you, bear fruit and increase, swarm through the land and increase in her. And Elohim said unto Noah and unto his sons saying: And I, here I am erecting my covenant with you and with your seed after you and with the soul of every animal with you / every soul living with you kol nefesh bachayah itchem, among the bird and among the beast and among every animal of the field kol chayat basadeh with you...and all flesh will not be cut-off anymore from the flood waters, and there will be no more flood to destroy the land. And Elohim said: This is this covenant-sign which I place between me and between you and between every living / animal soul kol nefesh chayah which is with you, for generations, for all-time: my bow I have set in the cloud, and it will be a covenant sign between me and the land...and I will see her, remembering the covenant for all-time between Elohim and between all flesh on the land. Gen 8:1, 15-9:17

In the story of the Tower of Babel, God scatters the people in order to force them to fulfill what was in the original blessing and in the rainbow covenant: fill the Earth. Why do the people resist doing it? Practically speaking, humans are the only species that can adapt to virtually any environment on Earth. Is that related?

j. And all the land was one speech and single words d'varim achadim...and they said: Let us build a city and a tower...lest we be scattered pen nafutz over the face of the land...And YHVH said: Let us go down and babble their speech there...and from there YHVH scattered them over the face of the land, and they stopped building the city. Gen 11:1-9

One interpretation of the covenant with Abraham is that after the flood, God has given up on creating a right relationship between adam and adamah. Instead, God is trying to create a right relationship between one people and one land.

k. And YHVH said to Avram: Go for yourself / to yourself...to a land that I will show you...and you will be a blessing...and through you will be blessed all the families of the earth kol mish'p'chot ha'adamah. Gen 12:1-3

Elohim remembered Noah and all the animals. The midrash uses this verse to show that God's mercy and covenantal love extend to the animals and not just the humans. Why were the animals rewarded? Because they kept their mitzvah—to preserve their species. (Tanchuma)

Swarm in the land. A kind of super-fertility, where the animals would reproduce as quickly as bugs. See below.

* Cursing the ground for the sake of humanity. God forswears destroying the land for humanity's sake—severing the connection between people and the land that has driven the story thus far.

* Sowing and reaping...will not stop. Not stopping is the mark of a world that has abandoned the significance of Eden, where creation is completed through resting or stopping. The Sabbatical and Jubilee years restore exactly this: resting from sowing and reaping.

* Terror of you. This sounds like dominion, but according to tradition, it is not. Rashi (on Bereishit Rabbah) says that after the flood r'diyah, dominion, did not return. Acc. to Rashi's interpretation of dominion (that the humans would call and the animals would come), terror is the exact opposite. Dominion and the image of God are connected in midrash—hence some say humanity was no longer in God's image after the flood.

* All that crawls which lives, for you it will be for eating, like green plants. This is the end of the last vestige of Eden: not only will humans and the other animals not share the same food, but the other animals will become food.

His soul, his blood. The blood is the medium through which all our cells breathe, hence like the breath, it is the animating principle of the entire body, which is also called the soul. In kasbrut, the blood must be completely removed. In the case of a wild animal, the blood must be covered with earth, in a way which honors the mitzvah, in a kind of burial of the animal's soul.

By the hand of every animal. The verse sounds like it means, 'I will avenge the animal that kills a human', but Rashi, Ramban and the Talmud all say it means, 'I will let the animals kill any person who kills another human'.

The image of Elohim. Here is the only mention of any ethical significance to God's image to be found in Torah.

Swarm through the land. 'Swarm' usually refers to bugs. There are only two places where it is used to describe human beings, here and in the description of how fertile the Israelites were in Egypt. The Egyptian response to seeing humans swarm was to be horrified.

I am erecting my covenant with you and with every soul living with you. All the animals are equal partners in the rainbow covenant alongside human beings.

* It will be a covenant sign. The land is a partner in the first covenant. It may even be the primary partner.

Babble. V'navlah is a pun on Bavel, Babylon.

Through you. The covenant with Abraham is the first covenant with God in which a human is the primary subject. The blessings include all humanity.

Families of the earth. Or the soil. After the flood, 'Noah, man of the soil ish ha'adamah, began, and he planted a vineyard.'

l. Six years you will sow your land and gather your produce. And the seventh you will release tish'm'tenab and forswear, and the poor of your people will eat and their remainder the animal of the field chayat basadeh will eat. So you will do to your vineyard and olive orchard. Six days you will do your works and in the seventh day you will stop, for the sake of your ox and your donkey resting l'ma'an yanua'ch and your female servant's child and the stranger re-souling vayinafeish. Exod 23:10-11

m. YHWH spoke to Moshe in Mount Sinai saying: Speak to Yisrael's children and say unto them: For you will come to the land which I give you and the land will rest/stop shavtab, YHWH's shabbat/Sabbath-rest...In the seventh year the Sabbath's sabbath shabbat shabbaton will it be for the land, a Sabbath for YHWH. Don't sow your field and don't prune your vineyard...And the shabbat of the land will be for you for eating: for you and for your male servant and for your female servant and for your hired-worker and for your settler living-as-a-stranger with you toshav'kha bagarim imakb; and for your beast b'hemte'kha and for the animal which is in your land chayah asher b'artzekha, all of her produce t'vu'atab will be to eat. You will count for yourself seven Sabbaths of years, seven years seven times...on Yom Hakipurim you will make the shofar pass through all your land. And you will make holy the fifty-year year, and call out liberty/release d'ror in the land, to all those inhabiting her. It will be a Jubilee Yovel for you – you will return each man to his tribe-possession, and each man will return to his family...You will do my statutes, and you will watch over my judgments...and settle on the land securely lavetach. And the land will give her fruit and you will eat to be satisfied and you will settle securely on her...The land you may not sell permanently latz'mitut, for the land is mine ki li ha'aretz, for you are strangers and settlers by/with me ki gerim v'toshavim atem imadi. So in all the land of your tribe-possession you will give redemption g'ulah to the land. Lev 25:1-24

In n there is a three-fold progression in which eating is turned inside out: 'If you will not listen...the animal of the field will make you childless...You will eat the flesh of your sons and your daughters...The land of your enemies will eat you'.

n. If you will walk in my statutes and watch over my commandments and do them, then I will give your rains in their season and the land will give her produce y'ulah and the tree of the field his fruit...and you will dwell securely lavetach in your land...And I will set peace in the land and I will uphold my covenant with you...and I will make myself walk in the midst of you and I will become Elohim for you and you will become my people... And if you will not listen...and if you will despise my statutes...to undo my covenant, even so will I do this to you... I will set my face against you...and your land will not give her produce and the tree of the land will not give his fruit...and I will send out against you the animal of the field chayat basadeh and she will make you childless...And if with this you will not listen to me and will walk with me in opposition b'keri, I will walk with you in a fury of opposition...and you will eat the flesh of your sons and your daughter's flesh you will eat...and I will desolate the land and your enemies will be desolate over her, those living in her...then the land will enjoy/desire irtzeb her Sabbaths...All the days of her desolation she will rest what she didn't rest in your Sabbaths when you were dwelling on her...You will be lost in the nations and the land of your enemies will eat you...And those of you who are left...their uncircumcised hearts will be bent-to-shape...and I will remember my covenant with Yaakov, and even my covenant with Yitzchak and my covenant with Avraham...and I will remember the land...These are the statutes and judgments and Torot which YHWH set between god and between Yisrael's children in Mount Sinai by Moshe's hand. Lev 26:3-42

Tish'm'tenah. The word 'Shmitah' is used only in Deut. 15, which describes how loans were canceled in the Shmitah. 'Permanent' slaves (who refused to go out in their seventh year) were also freed at the Jubilee.

The poor of your people. Here only the poor are mentioned with respect to Shmitah, while in section m, servants, employees, and the ger toshan, non-citizen or non-Jew, are all included. These others are included in Shabbat here.

* The animal of the field will eat. The Shmitah year emphasizes that the wild animals will eat the Sabbath produce along with the people. Similarly in m we read 'the animal which is in your land'. The one other time when animals and people share the same food is in Eden. Halakhically, in order for animals to be able to share the Shmitah crops, fences were breached and gates were left open.

* In Mount Sinai. The midrash asks, 'What does Shmitah have to do with Sinai?' (Rashi's answer is that all the details of the laws, even those dependant on the land, were taught at Sinai.) From an ecological perspective, the answer is clear: The whole purpose of the Sinai covenant is to restore us to a right relationship with the land.

* the Sabbath's sabbath. The ultimate Shabbat—the purpose of Shabbat. One might say that Shabbat is just practice for Shmitah and Jubilee.

Yom Hakipurim. Unlike other years, the Jubilee begins on Yom Kipur. Why?

* Seven years seven times. The Torah emphasizes seven again and again. It can mean renewing the cycle of creation. How do you interpret it?

Call out liberty. The verse on the Liberty Bell.

My statutes. Especially the laws of Shmitah and Jubilee. The rest of the laws, important in themselves, are also a supporting frame for these laws. See below in n.

* The land is mine, for you are strangers and settlers with me. This is the inverse of property rights: even land we can never lose is not ours.

Redemption. This can mean freedom, spiritual redemption, or messianic redemption. It can also mean redemption from debt or out of debt.

The land will give her produce and the tree...his fruit. The symbol of security is the fruit tree, which gives to us freely, without any loss to itself.

I will become Elohim for you. Is God not God until then? Rather, only after our relationship with the land is restored, can we encounter God in fullness.

* Your land will not give her produce. If you don't release the land, she may be yours, but will not give to you. If you do, and she is not yours, you will live with her in peace.

* The land will enjoy her Sabbaths. The land has a right to rest. All rights for the poor and the animals, for freedom from debt and slavery, stem from this right.

* She will rest. Acc. to 2 Chr 21 the people were exiled in Babylonia "to fulfill YHWH's word...until the land enjoyed her Sabbaths; all the days of her desolation she rested..." The rabbis also say that exile comes into the world because of neglecting the Shmitah year (Pirkei Avot).
